

...er, What breed of cat did you say you were?

It's CatsOnDeck for Central Pennsylvania Humane Society

Tallahassee, FL | December 06, 2010

Penni Moore (Design Coordinator, CPHS Additions Project), was a few days from committing to a cat containment purchase for their organization, when she happened upon the CatsOnDeck web site and, as she puts it, "I went into a full stop mode! The typical method of containment for groups such as ours is the cat condos which is usually metal, relatively small, and the only view is through a wire door in front. In other words, they're in a metal box on its side! When I looked at what CatsOnDeck had developed, it answered the main concerns we were trying to find solutions for, which were; openness, ventilation, safety, and modularity." She adds "For the first time since I've been involved with animal shelter work, to walk in and see a cat laying on it's back with paws in the air is a comfort level that is simply not a common occurrence in a shelter environment. What this means is a cat that is far more likely to adopt out, which is our primary objective. It's absolutely beautiful and heart-warming to watch people walk into our cattery and see cats jumping from level to level to greet them!"

"We wanted to create a product that provides a significant amount of configuration flexibility!" States Jim Montgomery, COO of CatsOnDeck. He adds, "Animal rescue operations have animal population and situations change periodically. With our modular enclosures and panel and clamp construction, they can quickly adjust to their new animal containment requirement."

CatsOnDeck (www.CatsOnDeck.com) has been selling its popular clamp and panel kits to pet owners since 2008, providing an easy to assemble and breakdown enclosure for cats and small dogs in homes, apartments, condos and RV's. The company has caught the attention of animal shelters and rescue groups because of the versatility of configuration, structural strength and durability of their enclosure kits.

Contact Information

James Montgomery
CatsOnDeck
6054 Miller Landing Cove
Tallahassee, FL 32312
Phone: 888-919-2287
Alt. Phone: 850-284-7599
eMail: jim@catsondeck.com

###

